No other borough has changed as much as Staten Island over the past twenty years. Significantly, poverty has increased by 90%. In response to this dramatic change, Staten Island Legal Services (SILS) opened its doors in 2004 to serve Staten Island residents and to fight poverty and seek racial, social, and economic justice.

With over 30 dedicated and highly-trained staff, SILS assists approximately 7,500 low-income individuals and families a year in preventing evictions and foreclosure, preserving affordable housing and homeownership, obtaining access to education, supporting survivors of domestic violence, assisting applicants for immigration status, and engaging in LGBTQ/HIV+ advocacy. In working closely with the communities we serve, our staff regularly conducts outreach and community education and builds relationships with community leaders and organizers, to achieve holistic solutions for our clients.

SILS advocates practice in many areas, including:

- Access to Education
- Civil Rights & Language Access
- Family Law & Domestic Violence
- Foreclosure Prevention & Homeowner Rights
- Housing & Tenants’ Rights
- Immigration & Immigrants’ Rights
- LGBT Advocacy

As part of Legal Services NYC, our other borough offices can help Staten Islanders with other legal issues, including:

- Government Benefits
- Unemployment Insurance Project
- Consumer Rights
- Employment Law and Worker’s Rights
- Disability Advocacy Project
- Pension Project
- Veteran’s Justice Project
